One can hardly help informing the gentleman that if he does not like Prescott and her people, why in sheol does he not pack his grip and skip to a more concenial clime. A dispatch from San Francisco says: W. G. Bates, of Prescott, Arizona, who is in the city engaging flume builders, says a firm of San Francisco contractors has just completed the erection of a dam at the narrow mouth of a canyon of the Hassampa river. The dam will hold ten billion gallons of water. Now we want to run water to the mesa below, some fifteen miles below, in a
